

The Home Office Helper

Bluetooth—We're Using It, What IS It?

Volume 1, Issue 15 May 2005

Bluetooth enabled phones, PDA's, keyboards, headsets, modems, printers—whew! What IS Bluetooth anyway? When should a business owner use Bluetooth versus other wired and wireless networking technologies? Find out here.

More Details

Wired Style

What is “ego surfing”? What are good guidelines for print a URL? What are the 10 principles for writing in the “digital age”? Find out in this book—and here!

More Details

Hot Hardware!

It's a phone, PDA, camera—and it's connected—WiFi, and Bluetooth as well! Check out HP's iPAQ 6315. The latest, hardware helper here at Home Office Reports.

More Details

Tech Spotlight

Flash cards, flash drives—what IS flash memory, how does it work and should you trust all of your business data to a flash device?

More Details

Jazz Up That Data!

If you're a “number cruncher” and constantly trying to find ways to make numbers more easily understood by “non number crunchers” then Xcelsius from Infommersion might be just what you're looking for! Find out more here!

More Details

Hot Finds!

Since we're on the topic of Bluetooth—how about a Bluetooth keyboard for your phone or PDA? This one, from ThinkOutside is SO HOT, we bought one for our HP iPAQ 6315. Find out why here!

More Details

To remove your name from our mailing list, please click here.

Questions or comments? E-mail us at dmielke@homeofficereports.com or call 972-529-9719.

<http://www.homeofficereports.com>